Amazing food, really amazing cheeses. The service was a little slow, but still good. Remember, this is a no tipping restaurant, so the service may reflect that. Its kind of hard to notice from the road, so if you think you didn't see it, go back. It's there. And there was good parking just around the corner. read more. The diner and its premises are wheelchair accessible and thus usable with a wheelchair or physiological limitations. What Misael Cummings doesn't like about Casellula Pittsburgh:

The cheese purveyor was beautifully erudite; she should own her own restaurant! The frico potatoes were so delicious, the cook is good, although the cheese pairings were not up to snuff, probably due to short time. Owner Brian has a unique unfriendly mien- we were once again presented to him for the 3d he studied lack of recognition or interest. His mercy will be much more at home in NYC (I am from there). The milieu... read more.
