What User likes about The Happy Vegan: no place to sit and eat (or even park,) but when preordered and swing past to a vanilla latte, breakfast sandwich, and brownie (one must,) this place meets several spots (but plan a hike for later on the day to finish these calorie lol.) read more. The restaurant and its premises are wheelchair accessible and thus reachable with a wheelchair or physical disabilities. What User doesn't like about The Happy Vegan:

I used to go here alot, because they have wheat free foods, but the quality has gone way down recently, it's really not worth it to go out the way to this sketchy location, in a warehouse area for a sandwich. On the past two occasions, I had to wait over 30 minutes for my order that I was already 10 minutes past the pickup time. Also there is only one spot, no other parking in the area on a very busy street that is a... read more.
