I went here once when visiting New York and think about it all the time. The owner, which an article online says is Daniel but is not Daniel, is awesome. Get the blood sausage. Get lunch for breakfast. Eat your beans and rice with a spoon. None of the pictures on here reflect the fact that you can actually dine in the restaurant, and I worry it's depressing turnout. There are like four seats. read more. For visitors of the establishment, the catering service is also available.
