I agree with @Joewa P21st two weeks ago with Pikaichi. Pikaichi's miso is not cheap, the noodles are not Chinese yellow-alkaline, and the char-shu is not frozen. The egg can't be a real onsen egg, but the Pikaichi menu did not make any pretense of it. I find @Joewa P21st recurring statements unnecessarily hard and for no valid reasons. #defendyourlocalbiz #defendgoodramen read more. What User doesn't like about Pikaichi: Quite disappointed. Start with food quality. The broth was quite tasteful, but I usually lacked the rich cream. The noodles were okay. There was no egg at all, which is what it depressed on two stars. The pig was a bit thin for me and not as a melt in your mouth as the best places have. The amount: small. Surprisingly small. They give you a small container of broth and it is not even 2/3 full, only over half. Maybe... read more. In the kitchen of Pikaichi in Medford, traditional meals are prepared with typical Asian spices tasty, and a lot of freshly harvested vegetables, fish and meat are used to prepare healthy Japanese meals. The Asian fusion cuisine is also an important part of Pikaichi. Anyone who finds the normal and generally known menus too ordinary should approach with a willingness to experiment and try some exciting combination of ingredients taste.
