this place has been seen on the basis of reviews here. we have a weak for shawarmas, and so could not resist when I heard of this authentic place. eating was really good, didn't disappoint at all. we had the shawarma and parviyot. the sweetness (bakhlava) were not impressed at all, perhaps not so fresh. it is a bit of a hike for us, but it is worth it. they are closed to fri and sat, so they think about it. The food is good, but not great. This is a small, storefront style restaurant. Apparently they have two menus. I was only shown one, and didn't see the other until I was leaving. I would recommend Yesh for a quick bite when you are in a hurry, but that's about it. read more.
