Honestly, I was intrigued by the red burger bun. I know it contains beet extract and it's such a niche idea that anyone with a culinary curiosity would gravitate towards. The burger was, in fact, pretty good. The fries were seasoned, but weren't at the same time? They tasted okay but could use more seasoning, salt maybe. The bun didn't taste like beet, but I feel like it left a slight dry mouth feeling. Would have to... read more. The restaurant and its premises are wheelchair accessible and thus usable with a wheelchair or physical limitations, and there is complimentary WiFi. What User doesn't like about Burger Girl:

First visit, no greeting, only one other couple dining in around 12:30pm. There was no flooring, looks as if all had been pulled up. The welcome mat was filthy, looks like it had been weeks since last cleaned, tables were dirty and cook and cashier just appeared to be bored and frustrated or just did not want to be there. The lady at the register was rude and does not know the menu. We paid $32 for a Jr burger and cl... read more.
