First experience in trying eithopian food and didn't disappoint at all. A very cozy restaurant, service is a little slow but overall was a nice experience. We ordered sambusa for appetizer and it was different compared to indian Samosa as it was made of lentils. The food is really not spicy at all. The vegan combo of collards, cabbage, chana dal and some red curry made of lentils was really nice with the injera. The... read more. What Andrew Russ doesn't like about Messob Ethiopian Restaurant:

All of the restaurants in little Ethiopia are basically indistinguishable from each other besides Meals by Genet and the vegan place. Service was acceptable but not over the top. the atmosphere was crowded, but hip and the food was as you'd expect. Bottom line, if you come to little Ethiopia, go to Meals by Genet. On the likely chance you can't get in, then go here or any other restaurant in this street, and you prob... read more.
