The food and waitstaff here were great! The atmosphere felt a little clubby for us with the loud house music. I get how old that makes me sound but it was intense. Also the table where we sat was pretty drafty as we were right in front of the door. We would have asked to move if there was a different table available. The bench seats on the wall looked cozy. The fish was fresh though, and that's really the only reason... read more. The place also offers the possibility to sit outside and have something in pleasant weather. What User doesn't like about Tsunami Panhandle:

As noisy as a sport bar. More expensive than average. Sitting places are not all comfortable. Best spot is small table for 2 on the right near to the entrance, only place where you can have a conversation. Food is good but overpriced read more. At Tsunami Panhandle from San Francisco you can try delicious vegetarian courses, in which no animal meat or fish was processed, scrumptious particularly are the Maki and specialties like Inside-Out that this place is known for.
