Saigon Restaurant in Omaha has become a popular choice for those looking to enjoy delicious Vietnamese cuisine. The restaurant has been around for over 20 years and continues to impress diners with their flavorful dishes at reasonable prices. The staff is polite and the service is prompt, although some may wish for more assistance in choosing dishes. Their appetizers are tasty and come in small portions. The pate so and spring rolls are highlights. While the stir fry dishes may not be the best in town, the soups and stews are a must-try, with the pho and seafood soups being particularly satisfying. The combination beef pho is often recommended as a standout dish. The restaurant also offers takeout, with favorites like pork banh mi and fresh spring rolls. Customers have praised the restaurant for filling a void in Omaha's Asian food scene, with dishes like bom bo hue and com suong nuong standing out. Despite some minor issues like a heating gas odor and lukewarm soup, diners continue to return for the fantastic food. If you're looking for a Vietnamese restaurant with friendly service and delicious dishes, Saigon Restaurant is definitely worth a visit.
