The Italian restaurant Cafe Prego has received mixed reviews from customers. Some have complained about the lack of homemade pasta and high prices for store-bought items, as well as slow service and questionable gluten-free options. However, others have praised the cozy atmosphere, friendly staff, and delicious food, particularly the fettuccine Alfredo and fillet with mushrooms and demi glaze. The restaurant is housed in an old building, and while some customers find the location charming, others have mentioned that it smells like an old house. Overall, reviews vary widely, but still, Cafe Prego seems to leave a lasting impression on its diners, both positive and negative.
